Key Experience

CFO Advisory & Consulting Firms: As a CFO advisor and executive consultant, Tom has provided interim, fractional, and project-based financial leadership across construction, real estate, healthcare, and other industries. His engagements have included developing detailed financial models and investor presentations for a $500 million private school development project, leading accounting cleanup for a $120 million national contractor sell-side transaction and supporting successful Series A and Series B funding for a rare disease clinical trial company. He has also directed accounting transformations, ERP implementations, and financial reporting improvements for privately held and investor-backed businesses.

Natural Stone Manufacturing & Fabrication: As Chief Financial Officer and Vice President of a commercial natural stone manufacturing, fabrication, and installation contractor with approximately $25 million in annual revenue, Tom oversaw accounting, finance, human resources, and administration. He secured a new $2.7 million line of credit, established a risk assessment and controls program, and developed budgeting, forecasting, cash flow, and company performance reporting.

Commercial Real Estate Development & Property Management: As Vice President of an affiliated commercial real estate development and property management company, Tom directed asset management and daily operations. He managed property purchase and sale negotiations, closings, investments, and financing arrangements.

General Contracting & Real Estate Development: As Chief Financial Officer of a general contractor and multi-entity real estate development business with approximately $20 million in annual revenue, Tom managed accounting, finance, and administration for projects ranging from $2 million to $15 million. He strengthened banking relationships, increased available credit and aggregate bonding capacity, and negotiated land development financing. He also established internal controls covering invoicing, purchasing, accounts payable, subcontract management, and change management.

Biotechnology Capital Project: As Finance Manager on the owner's team for a $988 million biotechnology plant and supporting infrastructure program, Tom led project accounting, financial reporting, budgets, and cost controls. He implemented an earned value management system covering construction management, subcontracts, and material and equipment purchase orders. He also secured a state sales tax exemption/deferment arrangement and managed the owner-controlled insurance program through completion, realizing $2.5 million in savings.

Engineering & Construction Management: As Regional Manager of Finance for the Western U.S. operations of an engineering, procurement, and construction management business, Tom directed financial reporting, project accounting, and performance reviews. He supervised accounting, project controls, and document controls teams supporting major commercial, institutional, and life sciences projects, including a $500 million hotel and casino and a $150 million life sciences project.

Roofing & Restoration Contracting: As Controller of a roofing and restoration contractor with approximately $25 million in revenue, Tom supervised financial reporting, payroll, accounts payable, accounts receivable, and job cost accounting. He developed the accounting department for a startup wireless technology division and implemented a Timberline software system across both divisions, including reconciliation of records converted from the previous system.
